MESAGI

It's been all about good vibes, great connections, and creating moments that truly matter. We connected, shared, created, and made memories that will stay with us as we move forward. And honestly, this is just the beginning; there's so much more to come!

— Leo Askha Putri

Dear Leos,

August has been a month of connection, creativity, unity, and new beginnings for the Leo Club of Pepiliyana Woodlands. I am truly grateful for every opportunity we had to come together, grow, and create meaningful experiences. Amidst all that we strive to achieve, I believe that being truly present in each moment and cherishing the people around us is one of the greatest things we can do.

The highlight of the month was LinkUp, an initiative built on the belief that everyone has something worth sharing. Bringing Leos and non-Leos together through poetry, prose, art, photography, and other creative expressions, LinkUp created a space to celebrate talent, build connections, and give individuals the opportunity to be seen, heard, and valued.

Our Joint General Meeting with the Leo Club of Panadura Alubomulla was another meaningful experience, reminding us of the strength of unity and collaboration. It allowed us to exchange ideas, strengthen friendships, and build new bonds that we hope will lead to many more collaborations.

As we move forward, our vision continues to grow. We look forward to taking our initiatives beyond our local community and exploring opportunities to create an international impact through meaningful connections and service.

Let us continue to connect with purpose, create with passion, and serve with heart, while remembering to pause, appreciate the present, and cherish the moments we create along the way. Together, we can inspire change that reaches far beyond ourselves.

MESSAGE

A year built on purpose, strengthened by teamwork, and defined by impact. As we move forward, let's remember that true leadership is not measured by how much we do, but by how well we do it. Let's choose quality over quantity, purpose over numbers, and meaningful impact over recognition. Every challenge has shaped us, every experience has strengthened us, and every step forward has brought us closer to the leaders we aim to become. The journey continues — stronger, sharper, more united, and with greater purpose.

— Leo Ijaz Imthiyaz

The past Leoistic year has been a journey of growth, challenges, teamwork, and meaningful impact. It tested our ability to take responsibility, adapt, work together, and turn ideas into action. Through every experience, we moved forward and contributed to building a stronger, more united Leo Club of Pepiliyana Woodlands.

Every project, collaboration, and individual contribution became part of our journey. Some moments brought success, others taught valuable lessons. But behind every achievement was a team willing to show up, step outside its comfort zone, and keep moving forward — because a club is strengthened not by one individual, but by a team united in vision and purpose.

As we reflect, one principle stands above the rest: quality over quantity. Success should be measured not by the number of projects completed, but by the purpose behind our actions, the value we create, and the difference we leave behind.

As we step into another chapter, the standard must rise. Let's focus on projects that matter, collaborations that create value, and service that leaves a lasting impact. Let's keep challenging ourselves, supporting one another, and making every opportunity count.

Leadership isn't about having a title — it's about taking responsibility and inspiring others through action. Let's carry that mindset forward and make this chapter stronger than the last.

Together, we've turned dedication into progress and ideas into action. Every project, every effort, and every small contribution has added up to something we can be proud of as a club. This edition is a celebration of that spirit — the teamwork, the creativity, and the heart behind everything we do. As we move forward, let's carry this energy into the months ahead and keep showing up for one another and our community.

— Leo Editors

Another month, another chapter added to our Leo story. As I settle further into the role of Chief Editor, I find myself noticing details I may have overlooked before, from the quiet effort behind every project to the small acts of service that rarely make headlines but always make a difference. This edition of INSPIRO brings you a glimpse into all of that: the events we organized, the moments we shared as a team, and a month full of genuine growth, connection, and continued commitment to our purpose as Leos. I'm truly grateful to everyone who contributed their time and stories to this issue, and to our readers for continuing to walk this journey with us.

Leo Hana Abdeen
Chief Editor 2026/27
Leo Club of Pepiliyana Woodlands

Every Leo Club journey is built through the people we meet, the challenges we overcome, and the memories we create together. This newsletter reflects that journey. Over the past period, our members have shown the true spirit of Leoism through service, leadership, creativity, and teamwork. Each project, big or small, reminds us that meaningful change often begins with a simple idea and the courage to act. As editors, we're honored to capture these moments and share not just what we accomplished, but the passion and dedication behind it. Let us continue to Lead, Empower, and Offer.

In a world where creativity knows no boundaries, LINKUP was introduced as a digital initiative designed to connect individuals through creativity, knowledge, ideas, and self-expression. The initiative provides an accessible platform where individuals can share their work, thoughts, talents, and perspectives with a wider audience, regardless of where they are.

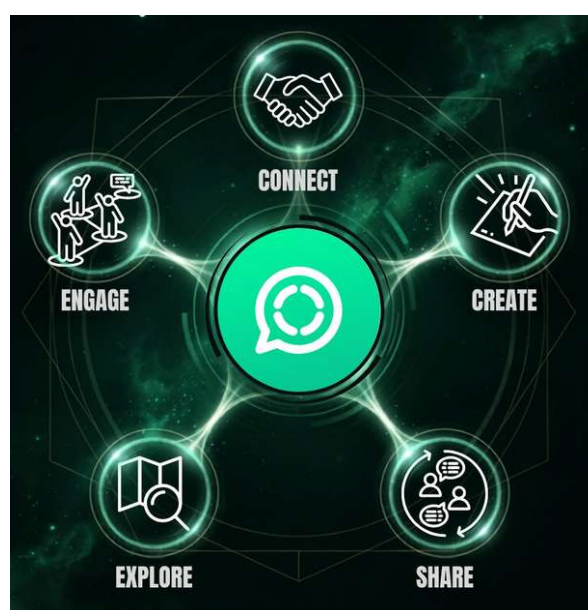

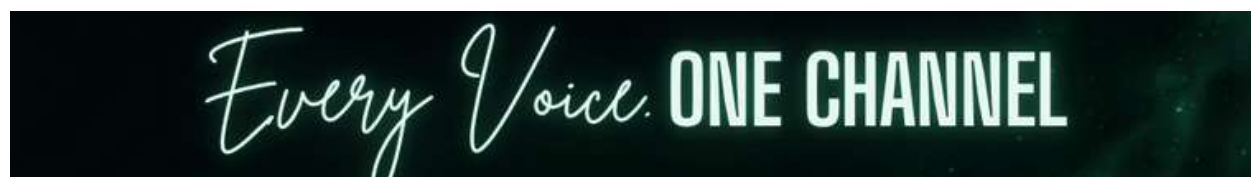

At the heart of LINKUP is its WhatsApp Channel, created as a space not only for Leos and club members, but for the wider community as well. Through this platform, individuals are encouraged to showcase their creative work, including artwork, photography, poetry, writing, educational content, personal insights, and other forms of meaningful expression.

The concept behind LINKUP goes beyond simply sharing content. It aims to create connections between people through the things they create and the ideas they carry. Every creative piece has a story, every perspective has value, and every talent deserves an opportunity to be seen. LINKUP provides that opportunity in a simple, convenient, and accessible digital environment.

The initiative also encourages individuals to step forward and share something they are proud of. By giving creators a platform to gain visibility and appreciation, LINKUP seeks to build confidence, encourage creativity, and inspire others within the community to express themselves. Another key aspect of LINKUP is its ability to create a positive community impact. By bringing different talents, perspectives, and ideas together in one space, the initiative encourages people to discover, appreciate, and learn from one another. It transforms a simple digital channel into a community-driven platform where creativity becomes a means of connection.

Through LINKUP, the focus is not merely on the quantity of content shared, but on quality, originality, and meaningful engagement. The initiative strives to build a collection of work that represents the diverse talents and voices of the community while continuously encouraging new individuals to participate.

Ultimately, LINKUP stands as a reminder that connection can begin with something as simple as an idea, a creation, or a story. By providing a platform for individuals to create, share, connect, and inspire, LINKUP aims to build a stronger and more expressive community - one creative voice at a time.

Give voice to your WORDS & vision to your CREATION.

Whether it's something you wrote, captured, painted, or imagined; we want to see it.

D2 classroom

The day was further enriched by the knowledge, experiences, and inspiring insights shared by our distinguished guest speakers, PCC/PDG Lion Duminda Munasinghe MJF, JP, Mr. Praminda Vindika, Leo Lion Navod Kiriwaththuduwa MAF, Leo Lion Eshan Kasturiarachchi, Leo Lion Thameera Dhananjaya, and Leo Vihan Manage FLM. Their guidance encouraged participants to look beyond titles and positions and recognize that true leadership is built through responsibility, commitment, teamwork, and service.

D2 Classroom was a full-day learning and leadership development session held on 26th August 2026 at SLTC, specially designed to nurture and empower the District Council Members and Club Executives of Leo District 306 D2.

The session provided valuable guidance on some of the most important aspects of the Leo journey, including effective reporting, planning a successful Leoistic year, understanding leadership responsibilities, strengthening teamwork, and becoming a more confident and impactful leader. Beyond procedures and responsibilities, D2 Classroom served as a space to motivate young leaders and deepen their understanding of the true spirit and purpose of Leoism.

D2 Classroom was more than a training session; it was an opportunity to learn, connect, grow, and prepare for the journey ahead. The knowledge and inspiration gained throughout the day equipped our leaders to face the new Leoistic year with greater confidence and purpose.

Because great leaders are not simply given a position—they learn, grow, inspire, and lead by example.

TECH CORNER

The Quantum Leap

How Quantum Computers Are Rewriting the Rules of Computing

Quantum computing works completely differently from the laptops and phones we use every day. Instead of bits that are simply 0 or 1, quantum computers use "qubits," which can exist in multiple states at once. This strange property, borrowed from quantum physics, lets these machines explore many possible answers to a problem simultaneously, making them extraordinarily powerful for tasks like drug discovery, cryptography, and climate modeling.

For decades, quantum computing was held back by one stubborn problem: errors. Qubits are incredibly fragile, and even tiny disturbances could corrupt a calculation. That's why 2026 has been called a turning point — two-qubit gate error rates have finally dropped below the 1% threshold across multiple hardware platforms, making reliable quantum error correction possible for the first time.

A standout milestone came from Microsoft and Quantinuum, whose H2 system demonstrated a reliable set of logical qubits with an error rate low enough that the system's logical qubits now make fewer mistakes than the physical qubits underneath them — a benchmark researchers are calling genuinely reliable quantum computing. Around the same time, IonQ pushed its own hardware forward, and Google's continued work on its Willow chip has reinforced that error rates shrink rather than grow as these systems scale up.

Today, tech giants and startups alike are racing to bring this power out of the lab. IBM, Google, Microsoft, and Amazon all offer cloud-based access to quantum processors, letting researchers and students experiment with quantum programs without owning specialized hardware.

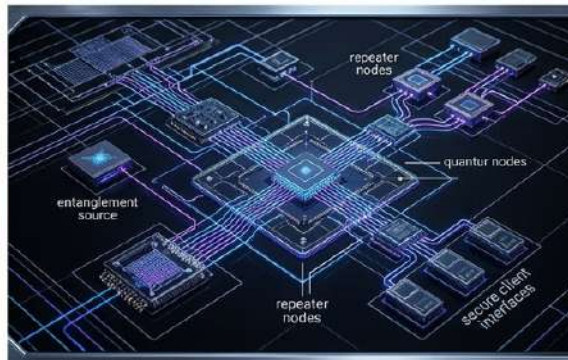

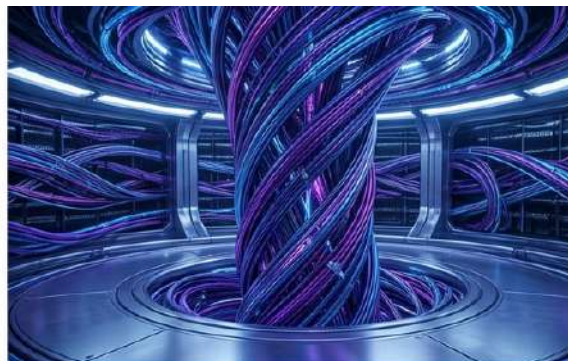

Meanwhile, companies like IonQ have crossed real commercial milestones, proving that quantum computing is starting to generate genuine business value rather than just research funding.

Quantum computing isn't just an abstract scientific pursuit either, it's quietly shaping the future of everyday security. As these machines grow more powerful, they threaten to one day break the encryption that protects our banking, messaging, and personal data, pushing governments and companies to adopt new "quantum-safe" cryptography well ahead of time.

Still, the road ahead isn't easy. Building and maintaining quantum computers requires ultra-cold temperatures, delicate engineering, and enormous investment. Full-scale, error-free quantum computers capable of solving humanity's biggest problems are still years away.

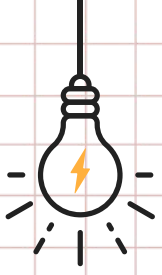

But like every great leap in technology, the journey matters as much as the destination. Each experiment, each error corrected, and each qubit stabilized brings us one step closer to a world where problems once thought unsolvable become solvable — reminding us that the future isn't just being predicted, it's being built, one quantum leap at a time.
